CLAIM WORK-RELATED DEDUCTIONS	~
Claim a fixed rate of $0.70 per hour for working from home to cover electricity, internet, phone use, and office supplies, no need to calculate each item separately.
Keep a log of hours worked at home (e.g. timesheets or diary entries) to support your claim.
Additional work-related expenses like uniforms, training, stationery, and tools can be deductible if they're directly tied to your job.
To claim a deduction, you must: have paid for the expense yourself (not reimbursed), ensure it is directly related to earning your income, and keep valid records or receipts.
If your employer paid you a work-from-home allowance, you must declare it as income and then claim relevant deductions separately.
Use a logbook to track work-related car use or claim up to 5,000 km at $0.88/km without one (if usage can be reasonably justified).

BRING FORWARD DEDUCTIBLE EXPENSES	✓
To reduce your taxable income for the 2024–25 financial year, individuals earning rental or investment income may consider prepaying certain deductible expenses.
Prepay deductible expenses such as: interest on investment loans (e.g. for property or a share portfolio), rent on an investment property (up to 12 months in advance), accounting fees, subscriptions, professional memberships, and donations to registered deductible gift recipients.
Pay next year's loan interest before 30 June to bring forward the tax deduction and reduce this year's taxable income. Speak with your bank or lender to arrange this.
Premiums for income protection insurance are tax-deductible and offer peace of mind. Consider prepaying to claim the deduction this year.
Make sure payments are made before 30 June 2025 and keep clear records. Contact us if you have any questions.
